WOMANLY MOTHERS AND MANLY BOYS

Supt. Halleck of the Louisville Male High School, in offering his resignation two weeks ago, paid a beautiful tribute to the mothers of the school's boys. His experience is in accord with our own and is so well expressed that we want to give it as wide currency as possible. It follows:

"My manliest boys have had the most womanly mothers, and the success of this school has been due more to the mothers than to any other single cause. They were often the first to respond to its dynamic spirit. I have never found another aid as powerful as the maternal apron string, that wonderful elastic fabric, woven with the warp of matchless affection and the woof of quickened intelligence.

"Many of these mothers I have met. Many are unconscious of help which they have rendered. Many think they have failed, but the failure has been vastly less than it would have been without the mother's efforts.

"So long as the memory of the apron string remains, its influence has not ended. You and I are two fold men when its resurgent memory comes to us."

To us there is nothing that inspires more than the thought and the hope of living in the memory of children. And there is certainly nothing more beautiful than to hear the young, the middle aged or the aged speak endearingly of their parents and pay tribute of deserved affection. On the other hand, there is nothing so sorrowful as to find one whose memory allows but scant credit or actual condemnation of father and mother for indifference, indulgence, carelessness, neglect, viciousness or ignorance in their treatment.

And there are both classes of parents, the indifferent class predominating, no doubt, if enough sentimentality could be brushed aside to get an actual census.

The apron strings, of which Prof. Halleck speaks, are all that he declares them to be when woven of the right material. But there are many that bind too tightly to wrong things.

Just as there is no one so influential and deserving of praise as the mother, when she is a real mother, there is no one so greatly in need of wisdom, of knowledge, of a sunny disposition, of hopefulness, of appreciation of her responsibility as the mother. Of course the father is a close second, and in some respects the same things might be said about him as of the mother.

It is true that mothers and fathers make the schools, and failure is more often due to them than to the child itself.

POWERS FAILS TO LAND

As reported in last week's Citizen, John Powers, brother of the 11th District Congressman, was slated for postmaster of Middlesboro, but Senator Bosworth of that city headed a protest and with Senator Bradley visited the White House and secured the re-nomination of Mr. Turner. The protest against the postoffice department's action in removing postmaster McHargue of London seems to have been of no avail, A. R. Dike already having been appointed to McHargue's place.

A DAY AT OLD JONESBOROUGH

Prof. Robertson Visits Historic East Tennessee Town—Reminiscences of Andrew Jackson. How the State of Franklin Came to be Formed.

Richmond, Va., July 6, 1912.
Editor of The Citizen:

On the way to Richmond I took occasion to make several little side trips to sites of historic interest, and it may not be out of place to write of a day spent in Jonesborough, Washington County, E. Tennessee.

Evidently this place is not overrun with tourists, for, so far as I learn, from the hotel register I was a solitary visitor to the old historic place that day. It is a straggling old town of about twelve hundred population, not changing much but proud in its traditions.

The hotel, or rather the inn, was one long, old building with wide veranda. The plain, everything was neat and clean. Here Andrew Jackson had sat when he came as a young man to the west. The tradition runs that he upbraided the sheriff of the County for failing to arrest a notorious criminal. He told him he had power to call on the whole community to aid him, and the sheriff, taking Jackson at his word, said, "I summon you, sir to make the arrest." "By the eternal" said Jackson, "I will do it" and setting himself to the task tracked him to the forest. Hiding in a tree the criminal was found and summoned to surrender. The desperado, who had refused to surrender before and had terrorized all, gave up and, too, without resistance when confronted with the spirit of Andrew Jackson. The place where Jackson lived while staying at Jonesborough, as a student of law, is pointed out yet.

Here, too, was the capital of the state of Franklin, the first self-governing community west of the Alleghenies. North Carolina had

CHANGE OF SENTIMENT IN CANADA

An election was held last week in Saskatchewan, one of the western provinces of Canada, the Liberal party being returned to power by a large majority. This is the first election that has taken place since the great Conservative victory last year in which Sir Wilfred Laurier and the Liberals were defeated on the Reciprocity issue.

Although the Government sent its ablest speakers to Saskatchewan, the Liberal party was returned to power, the Conservatives electing only 5 out of the 48 members. It is predicted that Sir Wilfred and the Liberals will be returned to power as soon as there is another general election.

SCAN THE HEADS

Our plan in reading a newspaper is to scan the headlines. We don't always have time to read everything nor do we always want to read everything in some papers. It seems, however, that nearly everything in The Citizen is both valuable and interesting. Still, time may be wanting, and we urge our readers to adopt the plan of scanning headlines for the good things.

And, of course, "Freckles" will not be passed by. It is attracting attention far and wide. And this week's installment is full of interest. We wrote to one person a few days ago that the story would be worth a hundred sermons to any boy and we mean what we said. We do want the boys to read "Freckles"—and the girls and the fathers and mothers.

And we want everybody to read the two columns, the Home Course in Health, this week — "Stimulants and Drugs in the Home." It is worth more than the price of the paper.

Prof. Robertson's article on old Jonesborough ought to be read by all who are interested in matters of History. And those who are in accord with our "clean-up" program will be pleased with Prof. Seale's article telling what is being done in the way of sanitation in Berea.

And then Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt speak to us this week endorsing Berea. Look for their pictures on second page.

And there is something for the farmers and the teachers in their regular departments.

Scan the headlines.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Mr. Alex Azbill of Kingston, 30 years of age, son of Mr. Joe Azbill of Richmond, one of Madison County's best citizens, was struck and instantly killed by lightning, Monday evening between 6 and 7 o'clock.

Mr. Azbill and one or two work-hands, having just returned from work, were in the barn lot putting up their team. The lightning struck the spot where they were, killing Mr. Azbill and one mule and knocking one of the men and another mule down.

Mr. Azbill married a Miss Lucas of Kingston about 9 years ago. They have one child, a boy, 8 years of age.

Rev. W. K. Azbill conducted the funeral services at Kingston at 3 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. Several hundred people from various parts of the County attended, after which the body was taken to Richmond for burial.

IT IS COMING

The day of clean streets, clean back yards and front yards, clean homes and clean wells—the day of sanitation and health is coming. It is coming soon for Berea, we are made to think from the enthusiastic article by Prof. Seale, found on the fourth page.

And why not? It would pay enormous dividends — dividends in health, dividends in comfort, dividends in looks and satisfaction to home folks and visitors.

We have been fighting flies and they are fewer this year than ever before, we are told. We have been fighting for clean streets and clean yards, and great progress has been made in this respect. We have also been fighting the weeds and this is really our chief problem now.

But the city is taking hold of the matter. There has been much agitation the ladies' clubs have done much, tho we are sorry to say that they failed to meet the proposition of the town council some weeks ago. But the inspector was appointed nevertheless and he is making his second round and his report is very encouraging.

We have noted and all have noted the effort to cut the weeds. It must be admitted that it is almost fruitless but the intention is good.

Why not begin earlier and why not keep it up? And then why not, when the weeds are cut, rake the cuttings off the walk? And again, why not CUT the weeds? Why leave so many standing? And why just top them?

We would not cut them that way. We would cut them close, or pull them, dig them up. Or better, we would scalp the ground and sow grass in its stead.

How beautiful Berea would be—will be, when we want beautiful surroundings.
